PROVISIONAL SPECIFICATION

FOR THE INVENTION ENTITLED:-

"METHOD AND DATA PROCESS SYSTEM FOR ANALYSING AND TIMING
BUY/SELL DECISIONS FOR A TRADEABLE ASSET INVESTMENT OR SECURITY"

Applicant:

JUPITER INTERNATIONAL (AUSTRALIA) PTY LTD

The invention is described in the following statement:

TITLE: METHOD AND DATA PROCESS SYSTEM FOR ANALYSING AND TIMING BUY/SELL DECISIONS FOR A TRADEABLE ASSET INVESTMENT OR SECURITY

5 This invention relates to a system and method for processing data on tradeable assets or securities. The system and method is particularly suited to the stock market, options market, futures market, exchange/currency market, commodities market, bond markets and other markets in which assets or securities like shares, options, futures contracts, bonds etc. are traded.

10 In any market, the price of an asset or security is generally subject to daily fluctuations. However, it is the extraordinary movements in the tradeable price of an asset or security which are the most difficult to identify but also represent the best opportunities to buy and sell the asset or security.

 Accordingly, it is the object of the present invention to provide a method of 15 analysing the data which is available on tradeable assets or securities and manipulating that data in order to identify opportunities to purchase and sell those assets or securities.

 Accordingly, the invention provides a method for analysing and determining the timing of buy/sell decisions of a tradeable asset investment or security including 20 the steps of: - receiving data on a number of specified assets or securities, determining the technical strength of each asset or security, and ranking the technical strength of each asset or security, selecting tradeable assets or securities having a ranking above a predetermined ranking, determining the fundamental strength of those selected assets or securities based on one or more of a group of 25 variables and ranking those selected assets or securities, and from the selected group of assets or securities, selecting assets or securities which are suitable for purchasing and assets or securities which are suitable for selling.

 The technical strength of a tradeable asset or security is a function of variables which are calculated from the recorded market characteristics of a 30 tradeable asset or security. These characteristics include the volume traded of the tradeable asset or security and the price at which the trade took place.

Hence the technical strength of a tradeable asset or security provides a strong indication of the demand for the asset or security and price movement of the asset or security. A predetermined level for the ranking is chosen based on experience and the fundamental strength of the selected group analysed based on one or more selected variables.

To determine the technical strength of a tradeable asset or security, it is preferable that the first variable which is calculated for each asset or security is the volume index which is defined as:

Volume Index equals actual volume divided by the benchmark or average volume (which may be seasonally adjusted) for each tradeable asset or security over a unit length of time.

It is preferable that a table of volume index be created by listing the volume index of each tradeable asset or security in a selected group of tradeable assets or securities, in descending order over any given period of time which may be, for example, the previous hour, previous trading day, previous trading week etc. This variable is used to identify tradeable assets or securities which are subject to higher than usual volume trades over the given period of time. Together with the table, a note would be presented stating how Volume Index was computed and over what period of time.

The data on the group of tradeable assets or securities under consideration, is first analysed by determining the volume index as defined below and each of the asset or securities ranked.

Volume index =
$$\frac{\text{actual volume}}{\text{benchmark on average volume over a length of time}}$$

This variable gives an indication of whether the asset or security is trading higher or lower than average. The volume index is combined with the price movement of the asset or security. Figures 1, 6, 7 and 8 are tables of shares in which the Volume index of shares for particular market sectors and market capitalisations have been ranked.

The group of tradeable assets or securities under consideration may be reduced by setting a predetermined limit on the ranking or actual value on the volume index and then only considering those assets or securities above the preset limit further.

5 The second variable which may be used to determine the technical strength of an asset or security is the price movement which may be also listed and tabulated in descending order of price increases and price falls in the same selected group. The combination of the ranking of the tradeable asset or security in the volume index and the ranking on the price movement gives a measure of the upward
10 technical strength of an asset or security, in the case where the price is increasing and the downward technical strength or weakness, in the case where the price is falling.

When an asset or security undergoes higher than average volume of sales with a corresponding increase in price then this indicates that the asset or security 15 should be considered as a potential opportunity to buy. Conversely, when an asset or security undergoes a larger than average volume of sales with a corresponding decrease in price then this indicates that the asset or security should be considered as a sell opportunity.

It is preferable that tradeable assets or securities are selected for the list of 20 ranked securities. The securities may be selected on the basis of a threshold ranking level as per one or several criteria which has been predetermined and may be based on past experience or on the actual combination of volume index and price movement.

It is preferable that for this selected number of tradeable assets or securities, 25 the fundamental strength of the asset or security is determined and used as a filter mechanism to identify opportunities to buy or sell.

Alternatively, the fundamental strength of a group of tradeable assets or securities may be determined and ranked based on one criterion in a large number of possible criteria and the technical strength preferably as determined above is used 30 to select from the higher ranked securities, on a fundamental strength basis which assets or securities represent opportunities to buy/sell.

In accordance with another aspect, the invention provides a data processing system which receives market data on tradeable assets or securities on a regular basis and performs the analysis method outlined above. The invention also relates to a computer program which carries out the method or includes the data processing system above.

The foregoing and other features, objects and advantages of the present will become more apparent from the following description of the preferred embodiment and accompanying drawings, in which:-

The method of the invention involves receiving, on a regular basis, data on the trading of tradeable assets or securities such as stocks and shares, options, futures, currency, bonds, commodities etc. and analysing this data to identify which of the assets or securities represent good opportunities to buy or sell. It is to be noted that definitions of earnings per share, book value per share (NTA per share), dividend per share, etc are as per commonly accepted industry practice. A good opportunity to "buy" is considered to be an asset or security where the potential and likelihood for capital growth is high and a good opportunity to sell is a tradeable asset or security where the likelihood that the asset or security will undergo a devaluation is high. The time period over which calculations are made may vary depending on the use or the program.

The group of tradeable asset or securities may be selected on the basis of one or several common criteria such as:

1. A common industry sector.
2. A market capitalisation above a preselected amount, lower than a preselected amount or between two preset limits, or
3. Inter market comparisons.
4. Any other criterion (refer points 1-34, pages 10-15) like credit rating, currency in which the security is traded, sales turnover, profit margins, earning growth etc.

Depending on the selection process for the members of the group of tradeable assets or securities, the filter mechanisms which are used to identify the buying and selling opportunities may be varied. When selecting a buying opportunity, the operator may establish preset limits above which the tradeable asset or security must be ranked in the variable in order for the variable to be selected.

For example, the operator may specify that in order to be representative of a buying opportunity the tradeable asset or security must be in the Top 1% (or Top 5%, 10%) of the higher volume index and in the Top 5% (or Top 2%, Top 10%, Top 25%) of price rises in a certain time frame in order to categorise a particular tradeable asset or security as having an upward technical strength and an upward fundamental strength hence signalling this tradeable asset or security is a buying opportunity.

5 The further consideration of the asset or securities on the list above the preset limit is carried out by considering the fundamental strength of each asset or security on the list. Figures 2-4 and 13-17 are tables of shares grouped according to market sector and capitalisation ranking the criteria chosen as the indicator of the fundamental strength.

10 Since the variable which is used to identify the fundamental strength of a tradeable asset or security can be varied and selected depending on the particular industry and market capitalisation, the combination of variables used to calculate the fundamental strength of the group of tradeable asset or securities can be varied with various combinations of the variables selected.

15 The following are a list of other possible criteria which could generate BUY or SELL signals and therefore act as additional filter mechanisms for SELL, if other criteria of high volume index and price fall are met or BUY, if other criteria of high volume index and price rise are met. The additional criteria:

1. Dividend yield

20 The dividend yield is defined by the historic dividend divided by the last traded price of the asset or security. For the purposes of selecting buy opportunities, the dividend yield is arranged in descending order and the higher ranked dividend yield tradeable assets or securities are selected based on this variable. Conversely for identifying sell opportunities low or no
25 dividend yield tradeable assets or securities are selected.

2. NTA/Price

NTA/Price (reciprocal of Price-to-Book ratio) is defined as the net tangible asset (NTA) backing of a tradeable asset or security divided by the last traded price. This variable is calculated for each tradeable asset or security 30 and arranged in descending order for those tradeable assets or securities which are of an average or benchmark level. A high NTA/Price ratio represents buying opportunities when this variable is used. The bottom of the NTA/Price list is used for identifying sell opportunities. The NTA or book value may be adjusted for inflation and substituted by the replacement cost of the assets and liabilities. A third alternative is an adjustment to make it close to a market value of assets less liabilities.

3. P/E

P/E is defined as the last traded price of the tradeable asset or security divided by the earnings per asset or security. The P/E ratio is ranked in descending order with high ranked P/E tradeable assets or securities representing sell opportunities and low P/E ratios representing buy opportunities.

4. P/EBITDAPS

The P/EBITDAPS is an abbreviation where P is the last price of the tradeable asset or security and EBITDAPS is the earnings before interest, tax, depreciation and amortisation per share. Low P/EBITDAPS tradeable assets or securities are identified as assets or securities which have the lowest multiple of price to earnings before interest, tax, depreciation and amortisation per share and a low ratio is indicative of a potential buy opportunity. Similarly a high ratio indicates a potential sell opportunity.

5. P/EVAPS

Identifying assets or securities that had the lowest (for buying) and highest or negative (for selling) P/EVAPS (defined as the price to economic value added per share) or the growth rate in earnings per share (ranked in descending order with the highest ranking used as buying opportunities and the lowest ranking used as selling opportunities).

6. Discount to Historical High or Premium to Historical Low

The discount at which the asset or security price is currently trading relative to its historical high price may be listed in descending order with a higher ranking used to identify buy opportunities and a lower ranking is indicative of sell opportunities. (The historical high price may be based on a pre-determined period eg. week, month, quarter, year, etc).

7. Gearing level

Other filtering mechanism for assessing "buy" possibilities may be gearing levels lower than the industry average or benchmark, interest cover above a benchmark etc.

5 Conversely, for asset sell possibilities, high gearing levels (higher than or worse than the industry practice or benchmark) or thin interest cover may be chosen. These latter criteria may be selected for selecting and identifying buying and selling opportunities from the group of tradeable assets or securities.

10 8. Discount/Premium to Brokers' Recommended Buy/Sell Price.

Price differential between current price and the brokers' buy or sell recommendation price. Buy and sell recommendations of various brokers may be recorded and the program tracks these in descending order of discount to broker's buy recommendation and descending order of premium to broker's sell recommendation.

15 9. Price to sales per asset or security

For certain stocks like technology stocks, filter mechanisms may be incorporated such as low price to sales per share and/or a high growth rate in sales per share, meaning it may indicate a good buy opportunity.

20 Conversely, a high price to sales per share and/or a low/negative growth in sales per share may indicate a good sell opportunity.

10. Market capitalisation, (which may or may not be adjusted for debt levels) of a certain key commodity/output or a certain key commodity/resource. For commodity stocks, filter mechanisms may include market capitalisation per quantity of commodity produced or market capitalisation per quantity of commodity reserves. A low ranking for each of these variables is indicative of a potential buying opportunity and a high ranking is indicative of a potential selling opportunity.

25 11. Unusually high change of ownership index

30 The change of ownership index (c/o index) is calculated as

Actual volume of shares traded

----- x 100

Total Shares on Issue

- 5 12. Identify ~~stocks which are market leaders or have a position of market dominance or high market share in their respective industry/principal market.~~
- 10 13. Identify stocks which had return on shareholders' equity greater than say 15% per annum or 25% per annum in last/X financial year or financial quarter etc.
- 15 14. Identify stocks which have high quality credit rating from rating agencies such as Standard & Poor's, Moody's, other rating agencies etc. Alternatively, ~~identify stocks as per pre-selected categories of credit ratings.~~
- 20 15. Identify ~~stocks which have low or high (on a relative basis) P/CFPS where CFPS is per share free cash flow defined by earnings plus depreciation minus capital spending minus dividends.~~
- 25 16. Identify stocks which have low volatility/high volatility.
- 30 17. Identify stocks where top executives have significant shareholding in the company.
18. Identify stocks which are at a premium/discount to industry group or overall market ~~based on various criteria.~~
19. ~~Identify stocks which have high/low gross margins.~~
20. Identify stocks which have debt level less/more than industry benchmark or S&P 500 or any other appropriate benchmarks.

21. Identify stocks which have a good/erratic track record of profitability. For example:

Buy Signals

- 5 (i) current quarterly earnings per share are up more than say 20% over the same quarter last year.

- (ii) annual compound growth rate of earnings exceeds say 20%.

Sell Signals

- 10 (i) last two quarters earnings have shown consecutive declines
(ii) there has been an annual fall in earnings exceeding say 20%

22. Identify stocks where inventories are declining/increasing.

23. Identify stocks where major new products/services have been launched.
15 Identify companies where new management is in place.

24. Identify stocks where insiders are selling more than average or where insiders are buying more than average. Identify stocks where institutional sponsors are increasing/decreasing.
20

25. Identify stocks where there is growth/decline in physical volumes of sales or production or inventories.

26. Identify stocks where profit margins are rising (buy opportunity) or falling 25 (sell opportunity). Identify stocks where return on capital employed is higher/lower than a benchmark. Identify stocks where earnings/revenue is higher/lower than a benchmark.

27. Identify stocks which have a higher/lower than benchmark/average growth in 30 sales/profits/physical volumes/inventories etc.

28. Identify stockmarkets of countries where economic conditions are better or worse than before. For inter-stockmarket comparisons volume indicator in value or dollar terms may be used for computation of volume index.
- 5 29. Identify stocks which have a low cost structure defined by operating cost per unit produced or by other criteria.
30. Identify stocks which have higher than average growth rate in earnings per share (EPS), net tangible asset backing per share (NTA), gross cash flow per share (GCF), dividends per share (DPS), etc.
- 10 31. Among certain sectors like bank stocks certain specific criteria may be created eg. Total Income/Average Assets, Operating Costs/Average Assets, Bad Debt Charge/Average Assets. These criteria may be stated as higher or lower relative to a benchmark.
- 15 32. Identify stocks of distressed firms with negative earnings or negative book values.
- 20 33. Make international comparisons of relativities as per various criteria spelt out and as per criteria which may be added/introduced later.
34. Other criteria for value selection like some or all of Benjamin Graham's criteria or 200-day moving average comparisons or any other criteria of selection may be introduced in the program.

Typically the considerations for buying and selling decisions in accordance with embodiments of the invention are as follows:

30

SIGNALS FOR IDENTIFYING BUY OPPORTUNITIES

Note: "AND" represents the Logic AND function. "OR" represents the Logic OR function.

- 5 1A. Upward technical strength is defined by selecting those stocks that have
- High Volume Index above benchmark/average
AND
- 10 Noticeable price rise as identified by price movements in descending order
AND
Market is not technically weak (meaning high Market Volume and falling Index)
- 15 1B. Upward strength in fundamental terms is defined by (refer criteria 1-34, pages 10-15) and would include logic OR function of one of several or all of these criteria. The program may pick and identify which of the criteria 1-34 are met.
- High Volume Index above benchmark/average (this criteria may be excluded under certain circumstances)
20 AND
High Dividend Yield
OR
High NTA/Price
OR
25 Low P/E
OR
Low P/EBITDAPS
OR
Low P/EVAPS
30 OR
High discount to its own high
OR
Low gearing level
OR
35 High Discount to Brokers' Buy Recommendations
OR
Low Price to Sales Per Share (for selected technology and other stocks)
OR
Low Market Capitalisation (which may or may not be adjusted for debt levels) to 40 quantity produced (for selected commodity producers)
OR
Low Market Capitalisation (which may or may not be adjusted for debt levels) to quantity reserves (for selected commodity stocks)
- 45 1C. Upward strength in technical and fundamental terms is defined by Stocks which have technical strength as per 1A above.

AND

Stocks which have fundamental strength as per 1B above.

- 5 Note: The factors of fundamental strength may be individually listed together with their percentile ranking in sector or relativity versus a chosen sector. Only a few of the 34 criteria are listed in Example 1 and Example 2.

10 SIGNALS FOR IDENTIFYING SELL OPPORTUNITIES

2A. Downward technical strength is defined by selecting those stocks that have

15 AND

Noticeable price fall as identified by price movements in descending order of the absolute value of falls.

- 20 2B. Downward strength in fundamental terms is defined by (refer criteria 1-34, pages 10-15) and would include logic OR function of several or all of those criteria. The program may pick and identify which of the criteria 1-34 are met:

Low Dividend Yield below benchmark

OR

25 Low NTA/Price below benchmark

OR

High P/E above benchmark

High P/EBITPS above benchmark

30 OR

High P/EVAPS above benchmark

OR

High premium to its own low

OR

35 High gearing level

OR

High Premium to Brokers' Sell Recommendations

OR

High Price to Sales Per Share (for selected technology and other stocks)

40 OR

High Market Capitalisation (which may or may not be adjusted for debt levels) to quantity produced (for selected commodity producers)

OR

45 High Market Capitalisation (which may or may not be adjusted for debt levels) to quantity reserves (for selected commodity stocks)

2C. Downward strength in technical and fundamental terms is defined by Stocks which have downward technical strength as per 2A above.

AND

5 Stocks which have downward fundamental strength as per 2B above.

The buy and sell signals will outline the filtering or selection mechanisms used to give a better idea to the user. Whether one wishes to buy or sell, the decision-maker may accordingly select the order as descending or ascending order.

10 The method of the invention and the data processing system using the method of the invention is suitable for use by individual and institutional investors, day traders, short-term traders, professional traders and brokers who maintain a list of tradeable assets or securities which are buying and selling opportunities.

A mechanism may be used for comparing a portfolio with a benchmark.
15 This comparison may establish deviation from the benchmark together with suggested buy and sell signals. A further mechanism may exist where the pros and cons of buy and sell decisions are automatically available on a real-time basis. Signals for identifying Buy and Sell Opportunities as per pages 15-18 would be used to identify BUY signals as pros and SELL signals as cons.

20 The software may be designed to make the filtering and selection available on a real-time basis in parallel with trading activity in the concerned market.

When the invention is embodied in a computer program, then it may be possible for the client or investor to log onto his or her portfolio of investments and download contra information from the stockmarket or other relevant source. This 25 information would then be manipulated and analysed in accordance with the method or system of the invention to maintain a customised library of relevant information for that client or investor. This may be an added consideration in the BUY/SELL decisions of the investor/user.

The library of relevant information may include information on price 30 movements, volumes, sectoral exposure, recent press clippings, stock market announcements, relative position of various variables, buy and sell signals in accordance with certain selection criteria of the program (together with assumptions and disclaimer and disclosure notices), user's target buy and sell targets, benchmark portfolio guidelines etc.

This historical information can be used to compare the various variables used in the invention including benchmarks to test the validity of buy and sell signals and 5 identify modifications, optional weighting factors or further criteria which could be considered in the future.

Comparisons of various variables including benchmarks may be made on a historical basis and on an inter-market basis to identify relativities, arbitrage opportunities etc.

10 Figures 5 and 27 are tables calculated to identify the best and worst performing shares over various periods of time. The information in these tables is an example of the historical information which may be gathered and used to test the hypotheses on buy and sell signals and other variables related to the buy/sell decision.

15 Figure 28 is a table of the commodity prices and exchange rates captured for a particular date to provide a reference for their effect on share prices.

It may be preferable for a benchmark or set point on any one or more variables at any point of time to be computed and/or communicated. The benchmark may exist for any sector or for the market as a whole. It is likely that 20 the benchmark will change with the passage of time.

New indicators may be created to compute the value of a variable relative to a certain benchmark ie. relative P/E, relative P/NTA, relative price rise or fall with respect to a section. (This may be termed over-performance/under-performance with respect to a sector benchmark).

25 Each stock may be given a percentile ranking as per a selected criterion. This percentile ranking would indicate what percent of the selected group were worse off than that stock for that criterion. For example, if there were 15 companies in the selected group and if the criteria was P/E and the stock had the fifth lowest P/E its percentile ranking (for potential BUY opportunity) would be 66.67. Likewise, if the 30 second criteria was current quarterly earnings growth and the stock was third in its selected group of 15 its percentile rank (for potential BUY opportunity) on current quarterly earnings growth would be 80.

Sensitivity Analysis of a stock may be carried out by setting norms of change of earnings per share with critical variables like prices of key commodities, exchange rates, interest rates etc. By using the current P/E multiple and/or other variables, arbitrage opportunities of buy or sell may be identified by generating appropriate signals.

It may be possible to do a sensitivity analysis of price to key variables like interest rates, inflation, employment data, current account deficit, prices of key commodities to identify arbitrage opportunities. For example, if interest rates have gone up and bank stocks have gone down, identify relative value within the banking sector ie. identify those banking stocks which have fallen the most as a result of interest rate falls (these might offer switch opportunities within the banking sector). Likewise, if gold prices go up, identify relative value within gold stocks.

The computer program may also make available other information and other opportunities as follows:-

- Comments made on a stock by brokers, media etc, as well as company announcements may be made available to a user based on the buy and sell signals generated, user's interest etc,
- Networking opportunities or loose alliances may be formed to discuss certain issues related to a stock or financial instrument. This may be in the form of talkback or chatting on the internet created for groups interested in sharing comments/analysis/research on a certain security.
- It may be possible to present a prospectus or Initial Public Offering (IPO) on the internet . Also, the program may be set up for creating comparisons vs current benchmarks in the stockmarket. As a result, investors may either buy or underwrite or sub-underwrite or bid for stock using real-time trading, internet, etc.
- The program may be used for identifying opportunities among closed end funds by comparing their Net Asset Value (NAV)/Market Price (MP) with other funds, stocks sectors, etc. Ranking of NAV/MP and other criteria may be done to identify relativities, value, etc.

- For Futures Markets, a third indicator besides Price and Volume will be used viz. open positions. This will also be compared with its own average or benchmark to create an Open Positions Index. The Open Positions Index may also be listed in descending order. For example, if Prices increase AND Volume Index is unusually high AND Open Positions Index is unusually high this will be a strong buy signal.
- Adjustments may be made for taxation purposes to suit investors as per their own circumstances and/or the tax regimes under which they operate.
- Opportunities for international portfolio investing, global investing etc. may be highlighted.
- Seasonal adjustments may include adjustments for double witching and triple witching.
- To illustrate the present invention, the following examples are provided based on the data of the accompanying figures. (Refer Examples 1 to 3 which are self-explanatory).

EXAMPLE 1A

- Stocks in which there was both a significant price rise (refer Figure 5A) and a significant volume index (refer Figure 1) in the week ended 11th May, 1987. They are separated into three capitalisation levels; over $200 million, between $50 million and $200 million, and under $50 million. They are in descending order from the highest rise of the week down to the lowest rise of the Top 15. Their volume index is also stated with the rank of their volume index in the Top 15.

EXAMPLE 2

- From the list of stocks in Exhibits 1A and 1B we follow certain stocks over each day of the previous week where they either rose or fell significantly. By doing so,
- 20 we can follow their daily movements and see the volumes traded with these fluctuations. By solely using the correlation between price movement and high volume index we can determine good (albeit rough) estimates of when to buy and sell the stock according to the procedures described in the patent. Note that only price and volume index have been taken into account here and not the additional
- 25 criteria as recommended.

EXAMPLE 3*Examples of High Dividend Yield and High Volume Index.*

5 This Exhibit lists those stocks that were in the Top 15 of the High Dividend Yield in their category of market capitalisation as at 11/5/87 AND were also in the Top 15 of High Volume Index subsequently. This suggests technical considerations of High Volume Index and corresponding price rise combined with fundamentals represent a sound BUY
10 opportunity. Daily volume data would have been helpful in making a BUY decision.

Since modifications within the spirit and scope of the invention may be readily effected by persons skilled in the art, it is to be understood that the invention is not limited to the particular embodiment described, by way of example, hereinabove.

The claims defining the invention are as follows:-

1. A method for analysing data and determining the timing of buy/sell decisions of a tradeable asset investment or security including the steps of

- receiving data on a number of specified assets or securities,

5 - determining the technical strength of each asset or security from recorded market characteristics of the security as a function of the volume trade of the security, the price at which the trade took place, and the direction of movement of the price, and ranking the technical strength of each asset or security,

10 - selecting tradeable asset or securities having a ranking or value of technical strength above a predetermined ranking,

- determining the fundamental strength of those selected assets or securities based on one or more of a group of selected variables and ranking those selected assets or securities, and 15 - selecting securities which are suitable for purchasing and/or securities which are suitable for selling based on the combination of the technical strength and fundamental strength of the security.

2. The method of any one of claims 1-3 wherein a volume index is calculated as

$$\text{Volume Index} = \frac{\text{Actual volume over a length of time}}{\text{average volume over the same length of time}}$$

20 3. The method according to claim 1 or 2 and used in conjunction with strength and direction of the price movement of the security as said technical strength of each security, wherein at least one fundamental strength characteristic is selected depending on the market sector and possible market capitalisation and the asset or securities selected on the basis of technical strength are marked according to said
25 fundamental strength characteristic.

4. The method according to claim 3 wherein the fundamental strength is a function of the volume index and at least one of the criteria selected from the group including:

Dividend yield.

30 NTA/Price.

P/E .

P/EBITDAPS.

P/EVAPS.

Discount to Historical High or Premium to Historical Low.

Gearing level.

5 Discount/Premium to Brokers' Recommended Buy/Sell Price.

Price to sales per asset or security.

Price to sales per asset or security.

Market capitalisation.

10 Stocks which are market leaders or have a position of market dominance or high market share in their respective industry/principal market.

Stocks which had return on shareholders' equity greater than say 15% per annum or 25% per annum in last/X financial year or financial quarter.

15 Stocks which have high quality credit rating from rating agencies such as Standard & Poor's, Moody's, other rating agencies etc. Alternatively, identify stocks as per pre-selected categories of credit ratings.

Stocks which have low or high (on a relative basis) P/CFPS where CFPS is per share free cash flow defined by earnings plus depreciation minus capital spending minus dividends.

Stocks which have low volatility/high volatility.

20 Stocks where top executives have significant shareholding in the company.

Stocks which are at a premium/discount to industry group or overall market based on various criteria.

Stocks which have high/low gross margins.

25 Stocks which have debt level less/more than industry benchmark or S&P 500 or any other appropriate benchmarks.

Stocks which have a good/erratic track record of profitability.

Stocks where inventories are declining/increasing.

Stocks where major new products/services have been launched or where new management is in place.

Stocks where insiders are selling more than average or where insiders are buying more than average. Identify stocks where institutional sponsors are increasing/decreasing.

5 Stocks where there is growth/decline in physical volumes of sales or production or inventories.

Stocks where profit margins are rising (buy opportunity), or falling (sell opportunity), stocks where return on capital employed is higher/lower than a benchmark and stocks where earnings/revenue is higher/lower than a benchmark.

10 Stocks which have a higher/lower than benchmark/average growth in sales/profits/physical volumes/inventories.

Stockmarkets of countries where economic conditions are better or worse than before. For inter-stockmarket comparisons volume indicator in value or dollar terms may be used for computation of volume index.

15 Stocks which have a low cost structure defined by operating cost per unit produced or by other criteria.

Stocks which have higher than average growth rate in earnings per share (EPS), net tangible asset backing per share (NTA), gross cash flow per share (GCF), dividends per share (DPS).

20 Among certain sectors like bank stocks certain specific criteria may be created eg. Total Income/Average Assets, Operating Costs/Average Assets, Bad Debt Charge/Average Assets. These criteria may be stated as higher or lower relative to a benchmark.

Stocks of distressed firms with negative earnings or negative book values.

25 Make international comparisons of relativities as per various criteria spelt out and as per criteria which may be added/introduced later.

Other criteria for value selection like Benjamin Graham's criteria or 200-day moving average comparisons or any other criteria of selection may be introduced in the program.

30 5. A data processing system including a means to receive data on a number of specified asset or securities, a data processing means programmable to use at least one of plurality of filter criteria to analyse said data in accordance with the method of any one of claims 1-5, and a means to output the results of the analysis.

5 6. A computer program for carrying out the method in accordance with any one of claims 1-5.

7. The computer program according to claim 6, in which the buy signals and sell signals in accordance with the combination of technical strength and fundamental strengths are displayed in accordance with their ranking..
